

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Wednesday, March 28, 2018, 3:00 AM

The church of the NRA

Manhattan: As I was listening to the teenagers who so eloquently and passionately spoke at the March for Our Lives on Saturday, I realized there are a host of similarities between the efforts to reform gun laws and those to reform statutes of limitation for child sex abuse, especially now that the students of Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School who survived the mass shooting last month have elevated the issue in the consciousness of Americans voters. Against responsible gun reform, we have the pro-gun lobby, aka the NRA, and regarding the Child Victims Act, it's the Catholic Church in that role. The politicians willing to sell their vote to the highest bidder are the same on both issues, most often Republicans. Brian R. Toale, Survivor/Advocate